WAS A GREAT TRIUMPH FOR BRITISH JUSTICE

The Story of the Crippen Case—Suspicion at First Aroused Gradually Grew—Conviction Almost Entirely on Circumstantial Evidence.

London, Oct. 24.—The Crippen murder case, which ended on Saturday, has proved to be the most sensational and dramatic tragedy in the annals of modern criminal jurisprudence of England. Widespread interest was manifested over it on both sides of the water. An American doctor married to a one-time noted music hall artist and living at Hilldrop Crescent was convicted of murdering his wife. Coupled with the tragic story is a pretty young stenographer, for several years secretary to the prisoner and with whom Crippen was known to have been on very friendly and intimate terms.

Fled Across the Atlantic.
A dash across the ocean by Miss Levee, the stenographer, Miss Levee, in the disguise of a maid, followed by a sleuth from Scotland Yard with the wonderful wireless played a prominent part, their arrest was effected as they stepped upon the North American continent.

The prisoner while guilty of a cowardly murder, proved himself a clever and resourceful man. In the witness box he has shown that collected spirit that marked him as a daring, fearless criminal. In his successful avoidance of the sleuths of modern times for days with Miss Levee disguised as his son, her hair clipped and wearing the full outfit of a girl of sixteen years or so, he had the whole civilized world watching him.

Displayed Wonderful Nerve.
When facing the awful charge of murder and mutilating his wife, with thousands of eyes scanning his every feature continually, he held his nerve, where many another would have broken down completely.

Towards the end of January, this sensational case came before the jury. He art and actress wife of the prisoner suddenly disappeared from her usual haunts. Her friends lost track of her completely and mysteriously.

Enquiries elicited the fact from Crippen that she had suddenly gone to California for her health. For a time the story was believed, but eventually suspicious took ground that everything was not as it seemed and that she was the victim of foul play. Gradually Crippen was entangled in a mesh of suspicion and to cover his wife's continued absence he next appeared in mourning saying his wife had suddenly died in California.

Polic Act Action.
Suspensions increased and finally Inspector Dew, of the famous Scotland Yard institution of famous modern-time sleuths, had a confidential talk with Crippen, telling him of the growing suspicion concerning him and the disappearance of his wife.

The very next morning Crippen disappeared and upon further enquiry Miss Stiel Levee, his pretty young stenographer, was also found to be missing. Her relatives knew nothing of her whereabouts, although they confessed to a knowledge of the attention paid her by Crippen.

Refusing himself to the task of unearthing and solving the matter, Inspector Dew proceeded to the Crippen house, at Hilldrop Crescent, where, during a thorough search of the house from top to bottom he discovered buried in the cellar the ghastly remains of what was once a human being.

Now came the time in earnest for Crippen. His capture had been hurried not under the most careful conditions and for a time no trace or clue to his whereabouts could be discovered.

Finally, however, the sleuths of Scotland Yard located him in mid-careen on board the Montrose steamer for America, as fast as steam could carry him. He was under an arrest, then his and Miss Levee's, and the detective located him and Miss Levee in the cabin of a boy.

Escaped for a Time.
Rewards had been offered for his arrest and though the fact that almost world-wide notoriety had been caused by his wife's disappearance, then his and Miss Levee's, and the ghastly discovery in the cellar of his home, he made good his flight on the liner with his companion.

But however clever to avoid arrest for the time being, he had not escaped and wearing the full outfit of a girl of sixteen years or so, he had the whole civilized world watching him.

Headed Off Crippen.
When located on board the Montrose, Inspector Dew hurried west on a faster liner, arriving on this side of the water before the prisoner. Continually in communication with the commander of the steamer, who had Crippen and Miss Levee ever under watch, Dew was able to know their every movement.

Unaware that their flight or true characters had been discovered, Crippen and his wife were happy in the belief that they would leave the ship at Quebec free and unimpeded, but all the time the outside world knew of every feature of the case. At Inspector Dew's presence at Father Point ready to arrest them, of the terrible charge they must face on their return to England.

World Rings With Story.
On the day of their arrival the papers on two continents rang with the story of the case. In the United States and in the most remarkable arrests in years by Inspector Dew, the famous Scotland Yard institution of famous modern-or nothing to say. Reporters were gathered at Father Point, from England, the United States and Canada in search of every possible detail to add to the sensation. Rushing to the scene in the Quebec jail, Inspector Dew in the course of a couple of weeks returned to England with his charges, there to await the dramatic trial now in progress.

Identifying the Remains.
In the meantime scientific and microscopical investigations and examinations by forensic scientists of England on the mutilated remains discovered in the cellar, declared them to have been those of a female, but without definite proof as to their being those of Belle Elmore. Facing this awful charge the prisoner maintained the utmost case and composure delivering his answer of "not guilty" at the outset of the trial in the business-like and unemotional manner. This demeanor was sustained even when sentenced to death.

PRES. HAYS REPLIES TO CITY'S COMPLAINT

Would Prefer to Have Better Education of the Men at Construction Camps.

At the meeting of commissioners yesterday afternoon a letter from President Hays of the G. T. P., replying to the complaint made by the city of the treatment of men at the construction camp west of Edmonton was read. The action of the city taken on the formal complaint by the G. T. P. was forwarded to the company together with newspaper clippings dealing with the matter.

President Hays stated that he would be glad to investigate any authentic complaints substantiated by proper evidence, but that he did not take newspaper clippings as coming within that category, adding that there was frequent evidence that they were inspired rather than from the standpoint of reasonableness and from a political view of the situation than from the facts.

The disposal of charges for $1,000 given by the Drummond McCall Co. as guarantee for the satisfactory operation of the motor purchased from them for use in the power house, and held by the city because of the failure to meet requirements, was the occasion of some discussion. Superintendent McCallahan held the view that the fact that its maintenance had involved an expenditure of $2,000, and that the amount of the deposit should go to maintenance account. After a brief discussion the matter was held over for further consideration.

The city engineer made the recommendation to proceed with the grading of the railway track on the Strathcona hill and the work will be undertaken in the course of the next few days.

The city engineer made the recommendation to proceed with the grading of the railway track on the Strathcona hill and the work will be undertaken in the course of the next few days.

The suggestion of the Great West Permanent Mortgage Company that the sinking funds of the city be invested in the savings department of that corporation, will be investigated by Commissioner Hutchins.

The following tenders for the heating plant for the car barn were submitted: The Standard Plumbing & Heating Co., $1,045; capacity 1,500 sq. feet; radiation service 199 sq. feet; 2nd Plumbing & Heating Co., West; capacity 1,200 sq. feet; radiation surface 784 sq. feet; cost per sq. foot unit $11.1; McKnight & Frost, Inc.; capacity 1,000 sq. feet; total radiation surface 921 sq. feet; cost per sq. foot unit $6.00.

The master was referred to the building inspector awaiting his recommendations. The Lockwood Bros. Co., Ltd., of Montreal, will undertake the inspection of steel for the Great Western bridge. The estimated cost, upon the rate of 40 cents per ton, will be $219.

A communication was received from the department of the interior to reply to an enquiry concerning the lease said to have been granted to the Edmonton Heating & Power Co., stating that the department has under consideration an application for water power rights at Rocky Mountain on the Saskatchewan river.

A telegram was received by the commissioners yesterday notifying them of the arrival at Athabasca

CANDIDATE SOUNDS CAMPAIGN KEYNOTE.
Great Fortunes Are Not Made Honestly and Monopolies Must Be Either Destroyed or Controlled in Interests of People.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 24.—Francis McIlwain, Republican candidate for Governor of Wisconsin, sounded the keynote of the present campaign tonight. He declared the existence of monopolies, upon an eminent English economist who has said: "Industries in America no longer belong to the industrialists, but to the financiers." He charged that great fortunes were not acquired honestly and said that monopolies must be either destroyed or controlled in the interest of people by the people.

He urged a general tariff revision, but not free trade, and said that the present tariff duties are too high. He advised the establishment of a national and impartial tariff commission, with the task of making general schedules in harmony with economic principles.

DIAMOND BELT FOR CHAMPION JOHNSON

The Colored Again Will Present Fight Between Arthur With Cuddy and Work Champion Again Occupies Centre of Stage.

New York, Oct. 24.—Jack Johnson, who was predicted, has been the stage once more. His automobile match with Barney Oldfield set down for Sheepshead Bay has given him the opportunity he sought.

The champion agreed with his manager that out of his share of the winnings of the automobile race, there should be deducted the cost of insurance for $15,000. Several American companies declined the risk, but a London company, famed for taking the long end of hazardous insurance, notified Johnson that it would underwrite his policy for any amount up to $10,000. He came on here to close up the insurance matter, and returned the same day.

His automobile license having been cancelled, Johnson issued a statement in which he said: "I have not the following reply to Mr. Taylor of the Automobile Association in response to a letter attempting to draw my driver's license. I return herewith the one dollar which you returned to me, same being in payment of license fee. I conferred to all conditions named on the application blank furnished me by your office and will not accept cancellation of my license. You are aware that you state to the press and others that I obtained the license by trickery or misrepresentation. You can not blame me for your lack of office system. I will go to the courts if necessary to secure my rights."

Belt for Jack Johnson.

"A delegation of capitalists intent to present Johnson, the heavyweight champion, a diamond belt, emblematic of his title. The belt was purchased with subscriptions raised by colored people. Johnson, who will wear the belt for the first time in the automobile race and while he will not risk it as a trophy, he is willing to let Oldfield the price of it from the result of the match.

Facing exhibition by the American Automobile Association if he goes ahead with his proposed automobile race with Johnson, Barney Oldfield has been wondering whether the honor of testing the colored pugilist champion is worth the penalty.

An unnamed letter, received here from New York, stated that the writer would be able to furnish some important information bearing on the case if desired.

The writer said D. P. Dickerson, to whom the letter was addressed, would remember him. Dickerson believes Ketchum was the victim of a plot.

DAREDEVIL BARNEY OLDFIELD'S ACCIDENTS

The Speed King Goes Through More Races Than Any Other Living Driver Since He First Began Thrilling With Death in 1902.

Barney Oldfield, in addition to leading a large bunch of automobile records on track and road, has a number of records of a different nature to his life's history, which is perhaps not equalled by any other speed king on this continent. He is credited with killing more spectators than any other driver of his kind, and has been through more races than any of them ever dared to attempt. His racing career began in 1902, and has never missed a year since he began his sensational work behind the wheel.

Some of his accidents include:

1902, Detroit.—Turned around on Grand Point track while driving the "393" a mile a minute. Thrown from car and badly bruised.

1903, Detroit.—Crashed through fence with "Winton Bullit" and killed two spectators. Car smashed and Oldfield's ribs and arm broken.

1904.—Hit by cloud of dust, ran through fence with "Green Dragon" in race at St. Louis world's meet. Killed two spectators. Oldfield's leg broken, head badly cut, chest crushed and otherwise hurt. In hospital three months.

1905.—Ran off track at San Bernardino, Cal. Car smashed and Oldfield's arm cut and head struck by falling fence rail.

1905.—Cut off by a competitor at Grange Point track in Duluth. Went through fence with "Green Dragon." Shoulder broken, arm smashed and cut.

1905.—Ground Beach, Fla. Tire exploded and "Green Dragon" ran into water. Oldfield thrown out in water and nearly drowned.

Green Dragon wrecked.

1906.—Crashed through fence at junction of roads. Badly hurt, head and ankle broken.

1906.—Crashed through fence at Los Angeles, Cal. Ran into rear of competing car which skidded in front of his car. Badly bruised and cut.

1907.—Arms paralyzed while driving car Indianapolis speedway. Thrown from seat and badly injured. Mechanic grabbed steering wheel and prevented car from crashing.

1910.—Steering knuckle of car broke in race, going 100 miles an hour on Indianapolis speedway. Car struck projection wall and was thrown back on to track.

Oldfield had also figured in many minor accidents not enumerated above.

CHANCE DID SOME FIGHTING

Chicago, Oct. 24.—A fat fight between Manager Frank Chance and a disgruntled fan in which half a dozen Chicago players and as many spectators joined, ended in a riot yesterday afternoon at the Pennsylvania depot, where the Chicago baseball team arrived late from Philadelphia. Thousands of cheering fans gathered to greet their favorite champions, and their claim into cut calls and hisses for Chance and his men and to show of encouragement for the fighting fan. When the fight was at its height the police charged with bayonets and the players were saved from rough hands.

It was a disconcerting fourth level following that awaited the arrival of the Cubs' spirit, and the Cubs team were cheered lustily when the men, who were charged from the train, Chance and the others stepped briskly to a line of waiting automobiles. A fan followed them, shouting out a fat fellow named Chance for the showing of his team in Philadelphia. Chance stepped into his machine, then suddenly turned and kicked his tormentor full in the face. He jumped out of the automobile and the two men went to the ground in a spirited fight. The man swung up and a hard right swing sent the player flying. Chance followed him up, raising left and right on his face, beating him unmercifully. A score of spectators started to interfere, and several Chicago players rushed to Chance's assistance.

The fighting was general when the police arrived. The players were backed into the automobiles, the driver ordered to drive on, and the crowd was then dispersed.

After the fight Chance was nearly mobbed by the more enthusiastic of the fans, who tried to beat him on the head.

CHANCE DID SOME FIGHTING

Chicago, Oct. 24.—A fat fight between Manager Frank Chance and a disgruntled fan in which half a dozen Chicago players and as many spectators joined, ended in a riot yesterday afternoon at the Pennsylvania depot, where the Chicago baseball team arrived late from Philadelphia. Thousands of cheering fans gathered to greet their favorite champions, and their claim into cut calls and hisses for Chance and his men and to show of encouragement for the fighting fan. When the fight was at its height the police charged with bayonets and the players were saved from rough hands.

It was a disconcerting fourth level following that awaited the arrival of the Cubs' spirit, and the Cubs team were cheered lustily when the men, who were charged from the train, Chance and the others stepped briskly to a line of waiting automobiles. A fan followed them, shouting out a fat fellow named Chance for the showing of his team in Philadelphia. Chance stepped into his machine, then suddenly turned and kicked his tormentor full in the face. He jumped out of the automobile and the two men went to the ground in a spirited fight. The man swung up and a hard right swing sent the player flying. Chance followed him up, raising left and right on his face, beating him unmercifully. A score of spectators started to interfere, and several Chicago players rushed to Chance's assistance.

The fighting was general when the police arrived. The players were backed into the automobiles, the driver ordered to drive on, and the crowd was then dispersed.

After the fight Chance was nearly mobbed by the more enthusiastic of the fans, who tried to beat him on the head.
